What to do if you want to make a complaint

If you are not happy with any aspect of the care and services provided by Hospice Isle of Man, please let us know.

Even in an environment of specialised care offered by dedicated and professional clinical and support staff, it is still possible for something to go wrong or for a patient, family or carer to have a genuine cause for complaint or concern.

However, there may be a reluctance to voice or register such concerns for fear of appearing 'ungrateful' or a 'nuisance'. Although this is understandable, it is not the best course of action because it is only by having possible failures or lapses brought to our attention that Hospice Isle of Man can put them right and strive to consistently deliver the highest possible standards of care to everyone.

By alerting us to a problem and giving us the opportunity to put it right, you are also helping other patients. You could even say that just as hospice staff have a duty of care, so patients, families and carers who feel the need to complain have a 'duty' to do so. This leaflet explains how you should register a concern.

You can also be assured that any complaint received is treated very seriously and investigated thoroughly.

Make your complaint as soon as possible

This is important because a fresh memory helps to establish the facts as soon as possible after the event. For this reason, any complaint received more than six months after the event cannot be accepted because it is impractical to look into it.

Who to complain to

In the first instance, talk to the Nurse in Charge or to his/her immediate manager. The chances are that the situation or any misunderstandings can be resolved quickly to your satisfaction. If not, you can make a complaint.

To make a formal complaint

Please put your complaint in writing and include the following information:

- A summary of what happened with dates if possible.
- A list of the things about which you are complaining.
- What you would like to see happen as a result of your complaint.
- Your name, address and telephone number
- If you are complaining on behalf of someone else, it is essential that you include his or her written consent.

In the first instance, please address your complaint to:
